

Acclaimed chef inspiring children for schools recipe competition

2nd February 2012

A fresh surprise for children at Bromstone School!

The Thanet Schools recipe competition has begun with a big splash this year. Dev Biswal, Executive Chef at the very highly acclaimed Ambrette restaurants in Margate and Rye, visited Bromstone School in Broadstairs to talk fresh ingredients and fresh cooking with the children.

For their competition entries the children will need to use one of the Thanet Earth products as a key ingredient, so Dev was keen that they should all try our cucumbers and tomatoes. He roasted some peppers to help explain how to make a really simple pepper sauce and to get the beautiful smell wafting through the school hall. Thanet Earth cucumber growers Addy and Arjan had sent along some very special heart-shaped cucumbers that they'd grown in moulds for the occasion.

We can't wait to see the competition entries the children create to see how inspired they were by the visit.

This competition is open to every school in Thanet, with age categories covering pupils from KS1 to KS4. The winning school in each category receives £250 for cooking equipment. All the information and entry forms you need are at www.thanetearth.com/recipecomp or call 01843 844700 with any questions. Deadline for entries is 10th February so don't delay!

Information for editors:

Thanet Earth is a state-of-the-art greenhouse development in Kent. When completed the site will feature seven enormous greenhouses, producing tomatoes, peppers and cucumbers. So far, three of the greenhouses have been constructed and are fully operational alongside an on-site packhouse. The crops are sold to the UK's supermarkets.

For information about the business, its background and operations, see www.thanetearth.com
